Additional Basic Questions

The potential of a film can be determined with a high degree of certainty if essential requirements are met in the screenplay.

You can confront your story & screenplay with several fundamental questions:

- Is the basic idea convincing and comprehensively worked out?
- Has an interesting story been developed from the idea, with an INTRODUCTION, CONFRONTATIONS-RESOLUTIONS-FIGHTING and a convincing RESOLUTION?
In short: with a beginning, a middle and an end.
So, is the story complete and told to the end?
- Have the dramaturgical rules been observed and, where the story allows, have surprising twists been added?
- Have the necessary sub-stories been developed that advance, comment on, supplement, vary and deepen the main story?
- Is the type of film narrative appropriate to the plot AND the story?
- Have the key scenes been fully developed and dramatized (Billy Wilder: 'milked')?
- Have credible characters with clear and interesting character traits been developed?
- Can the main character be identified with? Does he/she generate empathy?
Does the protagonist have a goal or does she/he have no goal at all and cause catastrophes?
- Is the antagonistic character strong or even overpowering and makes us fear for the main character?
- Is there a clearly developed main theme with universal potential?
- Is the dialogue appropriate to the characters (short) or are it just the authors talking?
- Is the story told credible and convincing in the context of the universe created?
- Have the various possibilities of using irony been utilised?
- Has a main genre emerged and has the mix with the sub-genres been successful?
- Is the narrative cinematic? Has the cinematic potential been utilised and have appropriate representational solutions been developed?
- Has the main character learnt something very personal and intimate, and have we learnt something with him/her?
- etc., etc.

How we teach Script Analysis to people who do not want to read.

- * We deliver the screenplays before the workshop.
- * We recommend to read all of them and to STUDY to masterpieces
- * We recommend to watch the movie before the workshop starts
- after heaving read / studied the script.
- * In the workshop we discuss elements of script analysis on the given examples.
- * In the evening, we watch the movie together.
- * The participants get some tasks on the script.
They have to send their results to the facilitators during the night.
- * In the morning, we show the film again. With turned down volume and we talk over to move to point out what has been written in the script and why. And how it wors on the screen.

5 of 21 workshop days

The 21 days of this workshop are intense. There will be no time left for other activities. It starts on Monday Aug 12 at 9:30 and ends on Saturday Aug 31, 2024, in the evening. During the weekends you will have to improve your texts with references to everything learnt during the training days. Or you will have to establish an analysis. It will be hard work. At the end of the workshop, you must be able to write a better script and to develop your project to a professional level.

	After the screening a short introduction to the script development and the production of the film.
13:00-14:00	- Working tea (every day at 11:00)
13:00-14:00	Lunch

Lecture 1b 14:00-18:00	Part II: Basic principles of script and film analysis: What is a “script for a film”? How to read a script and the preparation for an analysis. The script is the film! A carefully worked out script with a complete story which was adapted the right way for a film will allow the producer and the crew to make a good and successful film. It's no doubt that such a script must tell the complete story with three-dimensional characters, interesting settings and topics and a lot more.  Preparing for a script analysis you must forget everything you heard or read about this project (title, writer, producer, director, stars...). You must approach the reading of the script as if written by an unknown person. Read it without any interruption. Don't make any notes. That's the first reading. Now you know, who is the main character and you will have some idea what could be his/her goal. Knowing the protagonist and his/her goal will allow to figure out the act structure and to identify some more things like sequences, the important steps helping the protagonist achieving the overall goal and more. At the second reading/studying of the script you may take some notes like the names of the characters, the place(s), the time, the topics and, and...  Now, you are analysing the following issues: Idea, Premise, Outline, Story, Story-Step-Outline and Script-Outline, Story-Treatment, Film-Treatment Script, Shooting Script, Storyboard; the usual Format and Fonts Time & Place/Geography Universe of the Created Story, Genre, Story & Plot, Adaptation; Tension, Conflict, Mystery Shot, Scene & Master-Scene, Sequence, Act; Culmination/Climax, Exposition, Planting, Pay-Off, Twist, Resolution, Denouement/Unknotting, Sub-Stories/Sub-Plot, Mood, Pace/Rhythm Themes/Topics, Relevance, Irony, Running Gag, Credibility... Character, Biographies, Protagonist, Antagonist, Subsidiary Character, Dialogue, Empathy...
Task 5 18:30-22:00	Work on your projects individually or in groups.
